

False Heights are an alt-Pop duo from Taupō, New Zealand. Formed in 2016 as a result of an impromptu jamming session, April (Vocals/keys) and Ashley (Drums/Guitars/Bass) have been writing and performing infectious pop bops ever since. Their latest Self-Produced EP 'Too Afraid to Try' released in 2022 gives an insight into the unique eclectic sound the pair create together and it's a struggle to pack their vibe into a specific genre. Boasting elements of punk, reggae, rock and a huge helping of pure unapologetic pop, if you enjoy the sound of artists like The Dresden Dolls, Regina Spektor, Paramore, Cake, The Cranberries, and Jimmy Eat World then False Heights' music should most definitely be right up your alley.

2022 finished with a bang for the duo playing a New Years Eve set at Rhythm & Vines, and 2023 follows hot on the heels with an opening slot at Taupō Summer Concert warming up the stage for ZZ Top, Pat Benata & Neil Giraldo, Stone Temple Pilots and The Angels. Unsurprisingly, False Heights is experiencing a lot of buzz locally and beyond.
